Our South Carolina Correspondence.

CHARLESTON, April 14, 1851.

Secession—Position of South Carolina—Propocations, Inducements, and Drowbacks to Scassion—Destructive Effects of Sewardism and the Higher Lave—Pelicy of the Administration too Anniable with Northern Traitors—What is to be the End!— Revolt and Civil War, or a Return to the Constant Revolt and Civil War, or a Return to the Constantum?—The Danger still Impending—Preparations for Secession.

The storm has gone by—the Union is still intact. We are all safe, says Mr. Webster, at Harrisburg—the danger is over, says Mr. Clay—the threats of South Carolina are but the harmless echoes of the subsiding agitation. All right. Mississippi, after originating the Nashville Convention, has fairly squatted, like an old field rabbit at sight of the hounds. Gen. Foote, from having been the prophet appointing a special day for a dissolution, became the very prince and potentate of the compromisers—the father of the committee of thirteen, and the godfather of the big omnibus. Mississippi has repudiated repudiation, and nullified nullification. She can't go it. And Georgia?—What says Isaac She can't go it. And Georgia?-What says Isnae Watts?

"Hark from her Toombe a doleful sound!

My ears attend the cry:
Ye living men, come view the ground
Where you must shortly lie."

Georgia was all gunpowder. Toombs and Stevens were going to slay everything, and day after day their fire-sparks illuminated the House, and singed the hair of the freesoilers. South Carolina depended on Georgia to lead off in the dance; but Toomb and Stevens turned a sharp corner, and Georgia was mon est. Georgia backed out. Upon the whole, the compromises would do; but they must not do the like of that again. Georgia will not stand it.—Right or wrong, however, the Union is good enough for the present. From Georgia, South Carolina turns to Virginia.

"Old Virginny," however, rumiates upon this subject, turning over the quid in her jaw, and spiriting tobacce julee in a very practical way; and she comes to the conclusion that secession won't pay—that it is not exactly what she expected; and, cavalierly doffing her hat to the Huguenots, she will call again in the morning.

South Carolina stands alone. Mississippi repudiates her; Georgia gives her the cold shoulder, and "Old Virginny," after getting the Huguenots into the scrape, politely steps out, and "leaves them alone in their glory." What can South Carolina do single-handed! Will she have the temerity to seede! What does she count upon! Has sho any real serious intent to revolt—any real provecution,—or is all this threatening mere fuss and fury, gas, and gammon, and humbug! Can't be possible that any State would make soul an ass of herself as to be gaseonading, like the ancient Pistol, and all the time as humbess as a bag of wind! No—no: It is too late in the day to flatter ourselves with the idea that South Carolina is merely playing the braggest. She has carried the joke a little too far for that. She does not deliberately intend to condemn to eternal ridicule her Quattelbums, her Cavaliers, and her Huguenots. In one word, she is looking upon this thing of secession as a business operation. A large majority of her people—perhaps as many as three-fourths of them—are in favor of secession, with such on the provestions, and the establishment, in good time, of a Southern confederacy. Nay, more,—we verily believe that if a mass meeting were called to-morrow in every parish in the State, and the question were directly put of secession,—solitary and isoluted secession—or submission to the late adjustment, t mere demagogues, but by the most respectable, journaliste and politicians of the other States. Her love of the Union has been pretty thoroughly ridiculed and abused out of her. Living upon such terms in the family, it is easier to drive her out than to persuade her to remain in, and she is just in the humor in which it is more agreeable to separate than to exchange explauntions.

The inducements to secession are the prospective advantages of free trade, the prospect of a vast Southern republic, extending to the Isthnas of Pansana, including Cuba, and controlling the continental gateways between the Atlantic and Pacificand the further prospect of compolling the North, by treaties, to respect, from self-interest, the sacredness of the domestic institutions of their neighbors. We shall enlarge upon this very important brack of the question in a day or two. A single point for the present. From our commercial restrictions, Great Britain is introducing the cotton culture into every available corner of her colonies. To arrest this policy, free trade between her and the exteat States, or reciprocal treaties advantageous to both, it is believed hore, would be more efficient than agrabing else, and more advantageous to the South than any schemes of tariff protection or tariff protection or striff growthings.

When bed bugs, from and rouches
Their nexions columns master;
The rat too, then encreashes.
The mouse, sly plunderer, peache.
Putting indices in a functor,
But thy numic Powder, Lyon,
Is the food that insecte die on,
Mire and rate, too,
By the pills, which we rely on,
Are killed to the last scion.
